Learn About The History Of Industrial Kawasaki

(310)

市民ミュージアムの企画展について

It's been about a hundred years now since the Yokohama sugar refining business combined with the Tokyo electric power industry to build factories in the city of Kawasaki. The manufacturing base that developed here played an important role in the overall development of modern Japan. And from September 1st to October 14th the Kawasaki City Museum will be hosting an exhibition portraying the hundred-year history of industrial development and life in the city of Kawasaki.

The exhibition is called, in Japanese, SANGYO TOSHI KAWASAKI NO AYUMI HYAKU NEN SHINKA SHITSUZUKERU MONOTSUKURI NO MACHI (産業都市・カワサキのあゆみ100年・進化しつづけるモノつくりの街). Focusing on the enterprises that were instrumental in the development of the Keihin Industrial Zone and the lives of the people who lived here, the story of the 100-year journey of this industrial city is told through about 180 photographs and actual things produced here over that period.

In addition, until September 30th there will also be on display a work by Kawasaki native Taro Okamoto, called JYUUUKOUGYOU (重工業), or "Heavy Industry". The artist did his research for, and painted, this picture here in Kawasaki City's Keihin Industrial Zone. Along with it will be a collection of images by contemporary photographers which capture the essence of the urban landscape here.

Entry to the exhibition is 500 yen for adults, 300 yen for high school and college students and for those 65 and older, but middle school students and younger are free.

If you have any questions you can call the Kawasaki City Museum at 044-754-4500.
